The Waite Arboretum was established in 1928 by a bequest to the University of Adelaide by Peter Waite, a prominent pastoralist and businessman. The purposes of the Arboretum are experimental i.e. to demonstrate and evaluate the suitability of a wide range of trees to the local environment, to provide a valuable resource for teaching, research and propagation and to provide an attractive and informative area for passive recreation.

The Arboretum now comprises over 2,000 trees representing 850 species. It contains a number of special collections including one of the most comprehensive and well documented collections of eucalypts, more than 780 trees representing 340 species, subspecies and experimental hybrids. Other special collections include the pears and oaks.
